TEXAS AND TEXANS

TEXAS AND TEXANS.

By Will H. Mayes. "All Texans for All Texas"

Another Texas Port

The United States board of water engineers, the chief of water engineers and the rivers and harbors committees of Congress have all recommended the Point Isabel port project, and it has been put in the congressional emergency bill. Congress will doubtless pass the bill and the president will likely approve it.

That will give the rich Rio Grande Valley and the adjacent territory unsurpassed water shipping facilities to all ports of this country and Europe. It will about complete the line of Texas seaports along the Gulf of Mexico from Port Arthur to the * mouth of the Rio Grande and afford all needed ocean outlets for Texas * products.

Nothing except the failure of Texans to co-operate with each other can retard the development of this great State, "All Texans for all Texas" should be our motto.

SOME FACTS ABOUT MEDINA COUNTY AID SOCIETY.

CARRIZO SPRINGS BAPTIST CHURCH BRUCE ROBERTS, PASTOR CARRIZO SPRINGS, TEXAS February 5, 1930

A STATEMENT.

This brief statement from one of the oldest members of the Medina County Aid might not be out of place. Twenty-six years ago, while living in Medina County at Devine, my wife and I became members of the Aid. We have just paid assessment No. 309. I find that $309. divided by the 26 yeads shows $11.50 per year for each of us.

Then there has been the additional assessment of ten cents sometimes added, to cover postage, etc. I have no way of know. ing just what this has amounted to, but it has not reached fifty cents per year, so my insurance has cost me less than $12 per year.

This is less than $12 per year on $1,000 insurance, for, though there has been times when the number of members ran a little below one thousand, most of the time the number was one thousand or more. This is the cheapest insurance that I am carrying today or have ever carried. Furthermore, it is the most satisfactory insurance that I carry. In making 309 payments I have paid $309 to my neighbors and the families of my neighbors, knowing that in many instances it was going into homes where its relief would be as

I have been told that occasionally when two or more assessments come together some member complains of the high cost. Then such a member should do as I have done here, average it up through the years, and congratulate himself on being a member of such a worthy and beneficial association at so small a cost.

The measure of a man's integrity is the effort he puts forth to give value received for what he gets in return!

From all evil keep thyself first un-If you'd see the reforms for which you've toiled! The Texas legislature is now wrestling with the penitentiary problem. What the outcome will be can not yet be foreseen.

Whatever shortcomings it may have otherwise, it can not be said of Hoover's farm board that it is not an able propagandist for itself.

The season for planting trees is drawing near to the close. If you have a spot where a tree can grow it would be wise to plant it now.

If you like this paper see that your neighbor reads it too. See our All-About Texas Club offer and learn how much good you can do with a

Your patronage will be appreciated by our advertisers, and because they appreciate it they will give you the best possible service. It always pays to patronize those who appreciate your patronage.

Planting time approaches. As like begets like, the farmer who expects good crops will plant only good sound seeds of good variety. Valuable time will be saved by having an ample supply in readiness.

It should be the ambition of every one to be a home-owner. The young man who is willing to work and take things as they come one year with another can acquire a farm now as easily as ever before-and with careful management can be just as independent on it.

Old man Winter is doing a manful job to help preserve the crops of 1930 by freezing out the insect pests. The farmer can help him materially by immediately plowing under any crop residues still remaining on his fields, and burning off and cleaning up all nearby waste places.

In times like this, when would-be advisors are predicting dire misfortue to follow any expansion of agricultural activity along any line, the thoughtful farmer has the consolation of knowing that his safety lies in making his farm as nearly as possible self-sustaining. His own wants supplied from his own land, failure to profit from his commercial enterprises-crops grown for the market -can have few if any terrors for FEDERAL LAND BANKS.

The purpose of the brief editorial this journal was simply to warn farmers against too much faith in government regulation.

The statement that certain land banks had failed was inaccurate. The federal land banks have interlocking liability. All the banks are responsible for the losses of any single bank. When the Spokane land bank lost nearly three million dollars through bad management, the other eleven banks had to make good the loss. This huge assessment on the other banks came from the fund that should have gone to farmers in dividends. The efficient banks would have been saved a great loss if this bank had been permitted to "fail." In establishing these banks, the government made a solemn pledge that these banks would be supervised by the government in a way that would give the greatest possible protection to those investing in them. What has been the result?

The charge is made by Charles E. Leard, the author of a number of volumes on government, that under Harding and Coolidge the statutory guarantees of the federal government were flagrantly violated in many cases. There were overvaluations of land as demonstrated by bankruptcies, decline in bond values, and accumulations of land taken under foreclosures. On its own confession the Farm Loan Board allowed some banks to run over long periods without even a superficial survey of their operation.

The land bank system is really a great institution, and has large possibilities of usefulness and profit for the farmers of this country. Farmers who have invested in these banks and other real friends of the system should demand that the government do at once whatever is necessary to remove every suspicion from the land banks .- Southern Agriculturist.

FARMING has no respect for the debenture plan, a feature of the pending tariff measure now before congress; no more respect for it than for the protective feature of this same tariff. Both are designed to put unearned money in the pockets of a favored class at the expense of a non-favored class. But if we are to adhere to the policy of protecting with a tariff producers of commodities produced for consumption in this country, the only way to play fair with the producers of commodities that must be sold elsewhere is to offset the other fellow's protection with a bounty to him. Obviously if they could be made to balance each other all benefit from either policy to any one would be destroyed and we would be back where we were before the protective policy was invented-definitely establishing the injustice and unwisdom of tariff protection.

IS DICTATORSHIP AHEAD? Nothing stands still. An individual. constant motion. It either goes for-The government of the United States has for several decades been moving steadily away from the constitution and toward a new order in which state and individual rights will be submerged beneath an autocratic, centralized power at Washington. Now we are at a cross-roads. Either we are to go further away from constitutional rights granted to the individual and states, with the inevitable result of a dictatorship, or we are to turn back to constitutional principles of liberty and freedom of action, in our social and business

The "annual outlook report for 1930 prepared by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the U.S. Department of Agriculture" is one of the most pessimistic documents we have ever seen eminating from that Department. It offers no encouragement to producers of any farm products, save flax, strawberries and rice. to strive for increased production in 1930. If one were disposed to take their gloomy prognostications seriously the only sensible thing left for the farmer to do would be to grow just what he can use himself and go joyriding the rest of the time. Fortunately for the rest of the world the farmer will pay no attention to their "free advice"-at the taxpayers' expense—and go right on doing his utmost to produce all he can.

The farm debenture plan-which would pay an export bounty on farm products shipped out of the country out of government funds collected by means of the tariff on goods imported into this country-has been again brought into legislation pending in Congress as a rider on the tariff-revision bill. All bonuses are wrong in principle, but if we are to adhere to a tariff policy it is the only means of maintaining equal fairness between our people.

If this land that is already overburdened with laws needs another law, it is one to keep our elective officers and our appointed government employes on the job for which they are being paid and off of the job of scheming how to get more money out of the taxpavers to pay

Tws life where she was now, not so perfect nor caressing. Those night-time reveries are fittingly enshrined, Of childhood days and Mother's love, chaste and refined, Affections of old-fashioned Mothers were deep and sublime; This memory can't be effaced by change of place or time.

RAPTURE.

By Jessica May Young

My Love, I am still yours unto this hour! My heart's a'thrill at thought of your caress!

How eagerly I give, and you possess! A willing captive am I in your power. My pulses flutter like a wind-blown flower, Resistless in this tide of tenderness, I float upon a wave of happiness. The tokens of your love for me now shower. Through lilac dusk you come, and intently

I listen for your step when moonflowers glow, And here in sylvan nook, you, Love, draw nigh:

O press me to your loving heart gently And names endearing whisper, sweet and

As I, entaptured, breathe a blissful sigh.

TWO TREES I LOVE

By Clemma Wilson Gilbert

There are two trees I love best. My way to them I plod. When my soul finds no other rest They speak to me of God.

The Willow speaks in humble prayer; In praise, and takes no rest. The Cotton-Wood waves its branches fair Its head upon its chest.

Now when I look on a grove of trees, Or hear their surging billow, My spirit singles out with ease The Cotton-Wood and Willow

O God, how much we suffer When we fail to see the light, And the hours, how forsaken. As we pass thro Sorrow's night.

Along the trail of anguish-Down the naunting vale of tears, Christ is our loving shadow There to still our rising fears,

Thus Faith and ideals carried Bring us closer to our God, And we find He has followed Where our erring footsteps trod.

COMING OF AGE

Publishers report a steadily increasing interest in modern American poetry. This is important, because of the contention that the present period of economic progress-the last two decades-is marked by vital expression in every department of literature but poetry. Poetry is continually being revaluedand during 1929 an awakened interest in the genius of Emily Dickerson (1830-1836) brought forth a printing of almost two hundred of her hitherto unpublished poems.

The trouble is that we have not learned to recognize a contemporary poet when one comes along. San Antonio Daily Light.

YOU AND ME.

By Fletcher Davis.

Oh, it's easy enough, my dear, to drift With the tide when it's running smooth And there's never an angry storm to rift
The gentle winds that lull and soothe!

But he who would safely the harbor make Must breast and fight the combing wave, And the biting cut of the storm must take With firm, set face and heart that's brave.

For this life, at best, is a stormy sea, And there are wrecks many and sad-There must be no drifting for you and me If we're to reach the haven glad!

The fairest flower that ever bloomed And shed its fragrance on the air Is often hid away, entombed By haughty pride or wordly care.

Yet this flower blooms throughout the year It knows no climate, latitude; In hearts of men its roots appear, The flower's name is Gratitude.

SHIPS OF THE DESERT.

A Story of the Camels in Texas.

By Jessica M. Young.

About seventy years ago, or more, A new Secretary of War. (Possessing neither plane nor car) Thought that camels could be used for transportation

In the arid Texan waste lands; So he placed a post at Verde, Camp Verde, it was called;-He thought the camels more efficient And hardier far than ponies; This why he brought from Asia Minor A herd of fifty-three, and their drivers, Who were dark Armenians. And placed them on the barren waste .-Home of the mesquite and the prickly pear. As in orient provided Many sheds and spacious courts. A caravansary was built With solid walls of gray concrete, Also wells Egyptian, With strong men to draw the water.

Upon the camel's backs, The officers with their families. Took excursions; For the change in mode of travel. From the slow ox-cart, and the horse, Was to them as thrilling As airplanes are to us.

The experiment was novel; But was of little worth. For the camel's feet grew tender: And the long-horned herds grew restless Whenever they were near; Startled, the cow-ponies shied And stampeded o'er the plains,-Then at last a test severe was given, By the army at San Antone, 'Twas a desert journey to El Paso, Every camel failed completely, And straightway they were turned to grass, To shift unhampered for themselves And whenever they caused trouble They were killed upon the spot.

When the Civil War was over, Camp Verde was abandoned, And the bringing of the camels Is now but history, and a jest;-The camels all have disappeared.

By A. S. Draper.

Oft when returning, tired and worn, Burdened by an extra load of food, Or choice supply of household needs. The tired workman stops to wait Before he climbs the last long hill; Listening he hears a happy clarion call, His tired limbs new strength receive, His eyes with luster shine,-No longer sad, he hastens on, Forgotten are the burdens great, His cares are thrust aside; He presses forth with manly stride And laughs away the pain. And thanks the Lord again. For his little daughter, Rachel. His daughter Rachel: Rachel at the gate.

O what assurance floods my soul As I now glimpse a distant goal-No doubts or fear my peace destroy, I know true Faith without alloy. The night, like mist, passes by; No more do I grim fear decry. #### THAT 1930 CENSUS.

This year being census year, it behooves all of us to know something about the census and to be prepared to meet the enumerators courteously and answer their questions acurately when they call. The 1930 census will record such information never before covered in a national census and all of it will be extremely valuable to the entire citizenship of the United States. The population figures of the census Bureau have been accepted as the most authentic population data in existence for 140 years. These data are the data which are employed by the Sam Smith Manufacturing Compay to determine the population of Decatur, Texas, when consideration is given to the establishment of a tile manufacturing plant at Decatur. Mr. Smith must have accurate data on the population of Decatur and the surrounding territory. He must also have some reliable data as to wealth, earning power, other manufacturing naturally he looks to the census for reliable information. In view of the Fletcher Davis, Phone 127. fact that census data is accepted as authentic, it is very important to Decatur, Fort Worth, Houston and all other cities that the census enumerators get an entirely accurate and fair report from each and every famcomprehensive statistical compilation ever undertaken in this or in any other country. It will necessitate the employment of over 125,000 people to canvass the dwellings, farms, shops, factories, stores and other establishments for which data must be obtained. It will cover population, agriculture, irrigation, drainage, manufactures, mines, unemployment and distribution.

The 1930 census was provided for by the 71st Congress, and the Act is called "An Act to Provide for the Fifteenth and Subsequent Decennial Censuses and to provide for apportionment of Representatives in Con-

In taking the census of population, the law provides that 'It shall be the duty of each enumerator to visit personally each dwelling house in his subdivision, and each family therein, and each individual living out of a family in any place of abode, and by inquiry made of the head of each family, or of the member thereof deemed most competent and trustworthy or of such individual living out of a family, or obtain each and every item of information and all particulars required for the census; and in case no person shall be found at the usual place of abode of each family, or individual living out of a family, competent to answer the inquiries, then it shall be lawful for the census employee to obtain the required information as nearly as may be practicable from the family or families or person or persons living nearest to such place of abode who inquiries.

Some of the questions asked may leave the impression with certain persons that the data required are of a rather personal nature, but there should be no fear that any publicity of any character will be given it. All census employees are under oath not to divulge census information in any form and they are subject to heavy fines and imprisonment if it is divulged. And please remember that all questions are very important planted a larger feed acreage than AUSTIN MATRON SINGS usual and harvested a bumper crop. Since a limited market existed for feed in Nueces county he decided to market the feed through cattle, so 106 high grade Hereford calves carrying their milk fat were purchased and grazed for four weeks in a 17 acre second crop hegari field. The heads of this crop were in the soft dough. Also 106 hogs were placed in the feedlot at the same time. The calves seemed to gain from the start and did not lose a pound of their milk fat, and much credit was given to the milky condition of the hegari

While the calves were still grazing the hegari field they were gradually forced to ground maize bundles the fourth week. By the time the hegari crop was grazed down the caives were practically on full feed of ground maize and cottonseed meal. During the feeding period they consumed an average of 2 pounds of cottonseed per day and the equivalent of two and one-half bushels of dwarf maize. To give some idea of the quality of the feed, it may be ages 8 pounds with 5 pounds of heads and 3 pounds of fodder to the bundle, furnishing approximately the necessary requirements for caives of 7 pounds of fodder and 121/2 pounds of nead per day .
